MIDGET PLANE UNSIGHTED ON ATLANTIC HOP

FIELD AT LONDON GIVES UP HOPE FOR AMERICAN

London, May 30 (Tuesday) (AP)—Officials at London's Croydon airport early today gave up hope of sighting Thomas H. Smith, attempting a trans-Atlantic flight in a midget plane, and snapped off the boundary lights at 2 a. m. (9 p. m. E.S.T. Monday).

Darkening of the field semed an admission by the officials that they did not expect the young Californian to arrive here.

The flier had been enroute from the United States nearly 42 hours, the extreme limit which he had estimated his gas would last.

Fuel All Gone

The midget 65-horsepower craft had been reported over Londonderry in northern Ireland, Port Patrick at Wigtownshire in the extreme southwest of Scotland, and Saint Bees Head, Cumberland, northern England, but none of the reports was official and identification of the plane as Smith's was not certain.

Socres of other reports had been received by newspapers from persons telephoning that they had seen a tiny plane at various points.

At 12:45 a. m., Smith would have been in the air practically 40 hours and was believed to be nearing the end of his fuel supply.

Before taking off at Old Orchard Beach, Me., at 3:47 a. m., E.S.T. Sunday he had calculated his 160 gallons of gasoline would carry him 36 to 42 hours.

"Sheer Madness"

Officials, newpapermen and photographers kept watch at Croydon in the hope of giving the 24-year-old Californian a welcome. But the crowd that had gathered in the afternoon disappeared by midnight.

Flying a 670-pound, single-engined monoplane, Smith attempted to span the Atlantic in the smallest plane ever taxed with that assignment since the first successful North Atlantic crossing (by stages) 20 years ago.

Officials at Croydon openly expressed doubt he would make it.

"To attempt such a flight in a 85-mile-an-hour plane was sheer madness," said one.

Smith took off from Old Orchard Beach, Maine, at 3:47 a. m., E.S.T., Sunday in what he called his "baby Clipper." The name was ambitious. The plane is of a type seldom used for jaunts of more than 250 miles.

However, dove-tailed reports of

Royal Homage Paid King and Queen By British Columbians

BY FRANK H. KING

Vancouver, B. C., May 29 (AP)—British Columbia paid homage today to King George and Queen Elizabeth, the royal travelers whose smiles and democratic interest in everything and everyone they see have won Canadian hearts from sea to sea.

Thousands of Americans from the Pacific northwest states joined the crowds at Vancouver, whose population was doubled to 600,000.

For the king and queen it was like going home to England, with the sea at hand and the predominantly British community out to climax the welcomes the couple had received all the way from Quebec.

Even the weather was English, chilly and threatening rain, with skies overcast. From dawn, rows of bundled people awaited the passing of the royal car, as they would do on a day of royal celebrations in London.

Orientals In Costume

Strange new sights opened along the royal route through Vancouver's streets, however, and there were none stranger than 8,000 Canadian-Japanese in native costumes and 2,000 Canadian-Chinese who joined in singing "God Save the King."

Later, as the king and queen crossed over to Victoria, capital of the province, the Japanese fishing fleet moved out of the Fraser river to join other craft welcoming the British sovereign.

At Vancouver's city hall the king and queen were welcomed with a ceremonial rich in the historic symbolism of English parliamentary practice. The king ran his fingers over the mace, a great golden staff like the one used by the lord mayor of London, and thus restored to Mayor J. Lyle Telford of Vancouver the authority which in theory automatically goes to the British sovereign in any part of the empire he visits.

The city hall show went off without incident except that six-year-old Margaret Robertson, whose missing two front teeth had been a worry these past few weeks, almost lost her frilled bonnet in the wind as she presented a bouquet of roses to Queen Elizabeth. She grabbed for it and the queen told her to "take care of your pretty bonnet."

MOSCOW HEARS OF JAP CLASH

Soviet Minister Will Talk Wednesday On British Pact

Moscow, May 29 (AP)—Unconfirmed reports of fighting between outer Mongolian troops, under control of Soviet Russia, and Japanese-Manchoukuoan soldiers were received in Moscow tonight.

These accounts from the far east preceded by a few hours an announcement by Foreign Commissar Molotoff that he would speak Wednesday on foreign policies.

It was taken for granted he would speak on Britain's revised proposals for a British-French-Soviet pact.

Molotoff, who on May 3 succeeded Maxim Litvinoff as head of the foreign ministry, made his announcement when the supreme Soviet—U. S. S. R. parliament—rose at the end of tonight's session to inquire if he would address the body on the international situation.

"If the members of the supreme Soviet wish to hear me on this subject I will speak to them May 31," he replied.

Many airplanes were said to have participated in the far-east fighting, which Japanese circles in Moscow asserted had been under way since May 14 about 150 miles southwest of Manchiuli, in northwestern Manchoukuo. Soviet quarters declined to confirm the reports.

Shigenori Togo, Japanese ambassador, visited Vyacheslaff Molotoff, premier and foreign commissar May 25 to discuss the first clashes in the same area and was reported seeking another interview.

STRIKERS SUM UP GRIEVANCES

Conciliator Takes Hand In Briggs Dispute Affecting 70,000

Detroit, May 29 (AP)—The twenty-eight "grievances" of the CIO-affilated United Automobile Workers that led to a strike at Briggs Manufacturing Co. plants affecting 70,000 workers, were submitted today to Federal Conciliator James F. Dewey for arbitration.

Altthough Dewey is to report his decision on the grievances Wednesday, R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO, said the strike would not be called off until negotiations over "main points" of a new Briggs-UAW contract have been completed. Dewey said the decision on grievances would be binding.

Dewey is to preside over contract negotiations after his report on the grievances is completed.

W. P. Brown, president of the Briggs Co., was present at the meeting this morning at which it was agreed to submit the dispute to arbitration.

A company spokesman said the company would hold no meeting witth Homer Martin, head of the independent UAW, until after Wednesday's conference. Earlier Martin had said he expected to meet Briggs representatives today "to discuss a new contract."

Thomas said one of the "main points" to be settled on a new contract would be the demand for a union shop clause. The old contract expired a week ago, on the first day of the strike. At the time union officials demanded that the 28 grievances be settled before a new contract was considered.

Grocer Is Killed By Detroit Gunman

Detroit, (AP)—A gunman who shot and killed Harry Margolis, grocery store owner, early Monday was sought by police. Margolis, who was 60 years old, was about to start for home with the day's receipts when the shooting occurred. His wife, Bessie, 55, who was with him, told police her husband offered no resistance although he did not comply immediately with a command to "hand over your money." The bandit fired two shots and fled without the money.

Truman said.

Don'ts On Safety Suggested Today

Chicago, May 29 (AP) — The National Safety Council made six suggestions today for a safer Memorial Day holiday.

"Don't overdo in exercise, exposure to sun or eating," the safety experts advised.

"Check your car before the trip — especially tires, brakes and steering apparatus.

"Take it easy on the road. Give yourself enough time. Don't speed or take chances in passing.

"Don't drive if you drink.

"Don't take anything for granted at railroad crossings.

"Use common sense in swimming."

In May, 1938, the council reported 7,360 persons died in accidents throughout the United States, many of them on Memorial Day.

Kidnaped?

Disappearance of Mrs. Edna Smith, above, 22-year-old Boston school teacher and wife of Harvard graduate student, is being investigated by G-men after relatives expressed fear she may have been kidnaped. Last word from her was telegram to husband she would arrive in Boston May 23 from New York.

STATE BUDGET PROBLEM LEFT

New Revenues Will Be Last Resort; Solons Return June 29

Lansing, May 29. (AP)—Governor Dickinson said today new revenues would be a last resort in the delicate problem of budget-balancing that confronts his administration.

The 80-year-old executive said he would confer with house and senate leaders, to learn the parliamentary "motives" that inspired the legislature's adjournment with the job of balancing the current budget incomplete by an estimated $7,000,000, before advocating a definite program.

Although he insisted it was imperative that a balanced budget be worked out, he expressed the belief the lawmakers may have mapped out their own line of strategy—a plan of action with which he said he might not himself be "thoroughly conversant."

The governor said he expected the legislature to return full strength for the formal adjournment, sine die, on June 29 in order to remedy any "mistakes" that were made in the recent business session. Ordinarily the legislature musters only a handful of its members for the formality of final adjournment, and transacts no business in that brief session.

Sault Ste. Marie, (AP)—Funeral services will be held here Tuesday for Albert E. Sharpe, 79, Sault Ste. Marie attorney who was a delegate to the constitutional convention of 1907-08 which drafted the present Michigan constitution. He also had been a school teacher and a newspaper publisher. He died Sunday.

Kansas City Boss And Henchman Behind Bars

Leavenworth, Kas., May 29 (AP) Prison doors closed behind Tom Pendergast and R. Emmett O'Malley today simultaneously with a burst of new action in the notorious Missouri fire insurance compromise which caused the downfall of the Kansas City boss and his henchman.

Pendergast surrendered at the federal penitentiary this morning to start serving the 15-month term imposed a week ago when he pleaded guilty of dodging income taxes on $443,550 in 1935-36.

Of that amount he was paid $315,000 for his nod approving a settlement which gave fire insurance companies 80 per cent of excess premiums impounded while a proposed rate increase was in litigation.

In Kansas City a three-judge federal court granted a state motion today to reopen the case and ordered criminal actions started against perosns "who foisted a fraudulent order on the court" in its approval of the settlement.

Willingness of 137 companies involved to return the money — approximately $8,000,000 — to the court, with the possibility it might be returned to the policy holders was expressed by their representative, William M. Bullitt, Louisville, Ky., attorney. He said the companies were leaving action "entirely up to the court."

The court instructed District Attorney Maurice Milligan to institute contempt proceedings against all persons who knowingly had a part in the compromise payoff and to give the grand jury any evidence of obstruction of justice

Memorial Rites This Morning In Escanaba

Escanaba, as a community, will pause today, to pay tribute to its soldier and sailor dead, in the customary observance of the Memorial Day holiday.

The program of the day will open at 7:30 o'clock this morning, members of the American Legion meeting at that hour at the club rooms, to go to both cemeteries to conduct the traditional memorial rites.

A Memorial Day parade is scheduled for 9:30 o'clock, to form at the junior high school, with various civic, fraternal and patriotic organizations taking part. The line of march will lead to Ludington Park where the customary Memorial Day program will be conducted.

Attorney Clyde McGonagle will deliver the main address of the program, and E. R. Kauphusman will be master of ceremonies. Participating in the program arranged by N. P. Thompson and Emerson Harvey, will be the Escanaba municipal band and representatives of various organizations: John Seidl—Veterans of Foreign Wars; Fred Cram, Spanish American War Veterans; Mrs. William Petry, American Legion Auxiliary; E. R. Kauphusman, American Legion. Volleys will be fired over the bay in honor of sailors and marines.

Schools, offices and business houses will be closed throughout the day.

The American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps and the firing squad will leave for Bark River at 11 o'clock to take part in memorial services which are being sponsored by the Bark River ex-service men.

Mrs. Nancy Petry, president of the Legion Auxiliary, has requested members of the Auxiliary to be at the starting point of the parade, where cars will be provided for all members.

All Boy Scouts and Cubs marching in the Memorial Day parade are asked to report in front of the Escanaba Junior high school on Ludington street at 9:00 a. m.

Each unit will bring all flags and wear proper uniforms where-ever possible. Units from Bark River, Wells, Gladstone and Escanaba are invited to participate.

Scout Band to March

The thirty piece Scout band sponsored by the Odd Fellows lodge of Escanaba will march in the parade. The band has been popular since its first appearance at the local circus. They have played at the police officers convention, Odd Fellows convention and several parades.

DRIVE CAREFULLY

Chief of Police Michael Ettenhofer yesterday issued a warning to motorists to drive carefully during Memorial Day. A heavy automobile traffic is expected today, all of which increases the hazards on the highways and streets. A holiday without a single traffic accident is the hope of the police department.

MARY JOHNSON PASSES AWAY

Chicago Woman, Former Rock Resident, Drowns In Flat Rock River

Miss Mary Johnson, aged 42, of 7400 North Seeley avenue, Chicago, former resident of Rock and well known in Escanaba, was drowned about 9 a. m. yesterday in the Escanaba river several miles north of the Boney Falls dam.

Miss Johnson, along with two sisters, Amber and Elsie, also of Chicago was visiting over the holidays at Rock with her brother, Herman Johnson, and sister, Mrs. Charles Larson. The four left early yesterday morning from Rock to a ranch owned by the brother and situated on the west side of the Escanaba, which is accessible by a boat anchored on a cable.

The brother had ferried Amber and Elsie across the river, taking one at a time because of the high water. On the third trip, the rushing water turned the boat over as it neared the farther shore. The unfortunate woman, who wore a life belt, was swept down the river quickly while her brother managed to buck the swift currents to shore. When he regained his breath, he began a long trip down the opposite side of the river, walking eleven miles before sighting his sister just as two fishermen had sighted her. They brought her to shore and performed artificial respiration for several hours. Dr. Otto Hult, county coroner, was called and said death probably was due to shock as well as drowning.

Born In Rock

Mary Alice Johnson, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Herman Johnson, pioneer residents of Rock, was born June 26, 1897 in Rock. She was educated in Rock schools and attended Ferris Institute at Big Rapids. She worked as bookkeeper at Larson's store and at the Maple Ridge Excelsior company plant at Rock for several years before moving to Chicago about 18 years ago. She has been employed for the past 17 years by the Martin and Martin Shoe company in Chicago.

She is survived by the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. Charles Larson and Herman Johnson of Rock, Mrs. Albert Larson of Flint, Edward Johnson of Rice Lake, Wisconsin, Mrs. Russell LaBranche of Flint, and Amber and Elsie Johnson of Chicago.

The body was brought to the Anderson Funeral Home in this city to be prepared for burial. Funeral services will be held at Rock Wednesday afternoon with burial in Fernwood cemetery at Gladstone.

Worm Chaser Kills Geneva Fisherman

Geneva, Ill., May 29. (AP)—An electric rod Forrest Gaston made to drive fish worms out of the ground killed him today.

Gaston, planning to fish Memorial day, attached the device to a light socket and drove it into the ground, which he had just sprinkled. Deciding to move it, he took hold of it again and was electrocuted.

MATE FALLS DEAD

Duluth, Minn., May 29 (AP) — John Zaetsch, about 50, of Algonac, Mich., second mate of the steamer Adriatic, died last night as the vessel was being loaded with iron ore at the Great Northern dock, at Superior. Herbert L. Smith, Douglas county coroner, said a heart attack caused death.

Traffic Toll

Howell, Mich., May 29 (AP)—Jason Haines, 19, of Pinckney, was killed and two companions seriously hurt today in an automobile smashup east of here. Marcene Ludwidge, 19, of Pinckney, and Alice Pense, 17, of Onsted, were taken to a hospital.

EMPLOYERS GET BREAK IN NLRB

Right Will Be Given to Ask for Collective Bargaining Vote

Washington, May 29. (AP)—The house labor committee was informed today that the national labor board would amend its regulations soon to give employers the right to ask for a collective bargaining election under some circumstances.

Testifying on proposed amendments to the Wagner labor act, Board Chairman J. Warren Madden asserted that in many cases "there is no very valid reason" why employers should not have that privilege, which is now limited to unions and workers.

Like Senator Wagner (D-N. N.) author of the law, Madden said that the board had the power to permit such procedure but, without safeguards, "it would do no good and would do much harm."

"If you have that authority, don't you think it would allay some of the criticism of the board?" Representative Thomas (D-Tex.) asked.

"It would have some of that effect," Madden replied. "I have not the slightest doubt but that the board will make a change in that direction, but as long as the hearings are going on we thought we should get the benefit of the testimony of witnesses and the advice of you congressmen as to what you think would be desirable."

MICHIGAN MAN OPEN TO BIDS IN 1940 RACE

PRESIDENTIAL BOOM GETS UNDER WAY FOR SENATOR

Washington, May 29 (AP)—Asserting that the next Republican presidential nominee should be pledged in advance to serve but a single term, Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) made it clear today that he would accept the nomination if its comes to him, but would not actively seek it.

The national convention, he said in reply to Republican members of the house from Michigan who had urged that the nomination go to him, should set forth a series of principles which would "dependably promise to save the American system of free enterprise." Then, he added, it should "fit nominations to its principles."

Attracts Wide Attention

"In my view," he continued, "it must serve to create a common ground, upon which all like-thinkers may unite to produce an administration for all Americans in which a pre-pledged one-term president is manifestly free of all incentive but the one job of saving America."

The senator offered no elaboration of his one-term president statement, which attracted widespread attention immediately. It is a familiar contention in Washington that during a president's first term he may be tempted to fit his decisions to his own political future, and a desire to serve a second term. This is the principal argument underlying the occasionally advanced idea that the presidential term be made one of six years, with no re-election.

Roosevelt On Spot

If Vandenberg's suggestion is adopted, it is expected that the "one term" pladge will play a large part in the post-convention campaigning, especially if President Roosevelt seeks a third term. The situation, it is felt, would be such as to dramatize the differences between those who favor a third, term, under certain circumstances, and those who would limit a man to one, or at most, two, terms.

In replying to the resolution of the Republican congressmen from his state, Vandenberg said:

"Words fail to express my gratitude for this expression of confidence. I shall hope to proceed with whatever responsibilities lie ahead in a manner that may justify these generous opinions. At the moment, these responsibilities require me to announce that I shall be a candidate to succeed myself in the United States senate. If there are subsequent responsibilities of a broader nature, I shall meet them to the best of my ability."

Boom Due Soon

The senator's friends immediately predicted the early formation of a national organization to boom Vandenberg for the presidency.

Rep. Mapes, the dean of the Michigan house delegation, told reporters that the senator's reply had "encouraged his friends to believe that he would accept the nomination." He added that Vandenberg's refusal to seek the nom-

Senator Vandenberg of Michigan let it be known he would accept but not actively seek the Republican presidential nomination. The next Republican nominee should be pledged to serve but one term, he said.

A bill to carry out Secretary Hull's recommendations for amending the neutrality act was introduced in the house by Acting Chairman Bloom (D-NY) of the foreign affairs committee.

The senate passed, then reconsidered and agreed to take up later, a bill authorizing construction of a third set of locks at the Panama Canal.

The house ways and means committee heard recommendations for clarification of tax laws governing mergers and for removal of what witnesses called "indirect restrictions" on corporations engaged in foreign trade.

Chairman Madden for the national labor relations board told a house committee the board would amend its regulations soon to give employers the right to ask for a collective bargaining election.

NOVA ANXIOUS TO BOX LOUIS

Lou Figures He'll Take Baer In Stride Next Thursday Night

BY SID FEDER

New York, May 29. (AP)—Lou Nova is in a big hurry to get by Maxie Baer at Yankee stadium Thursday night so he can get a crack at Joe Louis, an opportunity that even the wiser heads of the ring aren't particularly anxious about.

Of course, madcap Maxie figures to have something to say about this when he and serious Lou tangle for 15 rounds or less, but Nova's chief worry now is that somebody will get to the heavyweight champion before him. He's convinced the Brown Bomber is "ripe to be taken"—and he wants to be the taker.

As a result, he figures on going by Baer in stride. He's even ready to "cross" his advisers, just so there'll be no doubt about the outcome.

Raring To Go

This sudden feeling of confidence where Louis is concerned came as a distinct surprise today. Before he defeated Tommy Farr last winter, Lou said he didn't think he'd be ready for Joe for a year or so. He gives you two reasons for the sudden change of heart.

The first is that the Farr fight convinced him he could go 15 rounds any time he went to the post.

The second came about when he saw Louis training for his fight with Jack Roper in California. He took a good look and speedily summoned Manager Carlin into conference.

"Get me that Louis in a hurry," he demanded. "He's wide open to be hit and he's ready to be taken. And I don't want anybody to beat me to him."

"Why, do you know," Lou said today, "I almost passed out when Roper tagged Joe with a left hand in their fight. I thought the number was up then. I don't think Tony Galento can do it. That's why I'm in a rush."

So, where Nova was content, only six months ago, to wait a while, now he's rarin' to go at Louis. He figures he'll get by Baer, that Louis will flatten Galento June 28, and that, as Mike Jacobs has promised, the two winers will meet in September.

Betting Odds Cut

Manager Carlin says he will give Nova orders to box Baer on Thursday, but he won't be at all surprised if, sooner or later, he goes out and slugs with Maxie because he's so determined to make it convincing.

"Expert" opinion continued sharply divided today on the outcome of Thursday's party. Even Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey saw things differently, the former picking Nova and Jack climbing aboard the Baer bandwagon. As a result, the betting odds were cut sharply, and one bookmaker even put Nova on top at 10-11.

Along Broadway and the Eighth avenue fight sector, the boys were suddenly talking about this battle, and, naturally, Promoter Mike Jacobs didn't mind a bit, for such talk, he feels, will be reflected at the box office. Some of the more optimistic folks around "Uncle Mike's" Hippodrome office even saw the possibility of a $150,000 gate.

Nova took things easy today at his training camp, and will have a final workout tomorrow. Baer had a mild drill and also will wind up tomorrow.

BAER POLISHES UP

Ferndale, N. Y., May 29. (AP)—Max Baer, satisfied with his condition for his 15-round fight with Lou Nova in Yankee stadium Thursday, coasted through three leisurely rounds of boxing today in his next-to-last workout.

In sparring with Elza Thompson and Sandy McDonald, the former champion made no effort to hurt his hired hands, contenting himself with speeding up his footwork and polishing his boxing.

Navy's Ace Rescue Expert Knows What It Feels Like To Be Trapped In A Sub

In command of the diving operations for the sunken submarine Squalus was Lieut. Commander Momsen. And here is the story of why Momsen was in lrage part responsible for the circumstance that the trapped men had a chance for life 10 times as great as they would have had in 1927, the year of our last submarine disaster.

BY MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer

Washington—"O. K., men; down 50 feet."

It was the bass voice of blond Charles Bowers Momsen, lieutenant commander U. S. Navy, the same Momsen who was charged with diving operations over the sunken submarine Squalus.

With four companions, Momsen was risking his life and theirs—10 years ago—to discover the how and why of submarine disasters.

The five experimenters were imprisoned in the hulk of an oid sub in Chesapeake Bay with disaster conditions simulated to the nth degree.

"Crack your ears!"

Momsen's voice sounded smothered, dead. Each face went through mimicking contortions. Every man nodded.

"Cracking ears" is a diver's trick to avoid sudden fainting, possible death. It's a cross between an artificial belch and hiccough to equalize pressure within and without the body. Otherwise, the eustacian tube is compressed. The pain is unbearable.

Minutes passed. The men squirmed uncomfortably on their board scaffold, suspended within a foot of the ceiling of the S-4's motor room. The S-4 had gone down with all hands a short time before. It had been raised for experiments like this one.

At last there was a slight jar.

"One hundred feet," said Momsen. "Now we'll find out what happens to men trapped in a submarine!"

Two Big Jobs

Their first job was to observe now much life room a flooded submarine compartment contains at 100 feet down. Their other task was to test the new Momsen submarine escape lung.

The Navy was divided on the argument over life-room. The mathematicians figured there would be enough. The physicists didn't think so.

As the water rose inch by inch every man watched a mark on the wall even with the scaffold. That was where the water was supposed to stop rising.

More minutes. Silence, save for an occasional gurgle. The air was getting a little stale.

Finally, the water lapped against the scaffold—and rose no further. Momsen waited a few minutes longer.

Now every anxoius face was turned to the side, every ear toward the ceeiling.

Crack! Boom! Then a noise like thunder dying away in the distance.

"There goes the bubble, men!"

Momsen's face lighted, and his right eye winked as it does so often when he plays one of his famous practical jokes.

Momsen went over the experiment in his mind:

The mathematicians were right. There was life room in a flooded compartment at 100 feet.

Pressure Equalizes

A sea-valve had been opened into the compartment when the old sub was lowered. The water coming in from the outside was expected to equalize air and water pressure in the comportment but the question was: at what level? Pressure equalization mean the water would stop rising. Would the sandwich of air left between the water and the ceiling remain thick enough to sustain life? Would it permit a man to move around and don his artificial lung for a try to escape?

There was enough room. And pressure equalization meant the normal 33,000 pounds of water pressure against the hatch leading to safety had been relieved. The explosive rumble the men had waited for was the signal that a smaller bubble of air within the hatch had escaped, and the way to the top was clear. The hatch was free.

Momsen gave the order to adjust artificial lungs for the riskiest part of the experiment. The lung had worked in diving bells and tanks, but would it work under actual disaster condition?

The commander nodded to the man nearest the hatch.

The man crawled slowly to the edge of the scaffold. He tested the clothes-pin like affair, closing his nostrils. Then he adjusted once more the gas-mask and oxygen bag across his face and chest. The mask was his artificial bronchial tubes. The hot-water bag affair across his chest contained life giving oxygen for the trip to the surface.

Everything set, he dropped into the water and felt his way to the hatch. Ascending slowly, he watched for the buoy line dropped from a surface vessel above. The line and buoy would permit him to stop along the way up to equalize the pressure against his body. If he didn't stop occasionally he would suffer the bends—the excruciating pain of air bubbles in the blood stream.

On His Way

Slowly he went up, breathing the oxygen.

Below, Momsen counted out minutes.

"Ten minutes!" he said. "Next."

And each man left the motor room as had the first. Momsen was last. Every man came up, none the worse for his experience.

Aboard the submarine tender Momsen was congratulated on all sides.

"Forget it," he said. "I didn't develop this lung. These scientists and drivers did all the work. Let's go get a glass of beer to rest our stomachs."

But a few weeks later he received from President Hoover the Distinguished Service Medal for accepting the responsibility of leading men within an ace of death so that others might live.

And today he's the Navy's No. 1 expert on diving operations over a sunken sub. That's why he was put in charge of diving operations over the Squalus. And that accounts in part, for the fact that Squalus crew men are alive today.

A Gadgeteer

Momsen is a natural born tinkerer—with a yen for fun and adventure plus promotion and pay.

When he left Annapolis in 1920, he had no idea he would ever be a sub-mariner.

But he did have a hunch he'd like to get ahead a little faster than most, so he applied for submarine service, where the competition was not so keen.

Soon he was commanding his own submarine. At length he had commanded five of the navy's metal fishes, and was concentrating his tinkering on escape devices.

Just about that time—in 1927—the S-4 went down with all hands off Massachusetts, and Momsen's real career was under way.

"I'm going to work on an artificial lung," Momsen told one of his associates in the sub service. "A man ought to have a fighting chance down there."

That was one of the few times Momsen allowed himself to be serious with a fellow officer. He's the jolly-good-fellow type; favors beer and his Scotch when he's off duty in foreign lands, and loves a practical joke.

On duty, Momsen is a tireless, enthusiastic worker. He's German, but his hefty body, bull neck, blond, over-the-forehead hair, has earned him the nickname "Swede."

Momsen's 42, father of three daughters in their teens, a native of Long Island and a fair golfer. He's an all-round athlete with a fondness for baseball. His family adores him.

MIDLAND PILOT DIES IN CRASH

Small Monoplane Falls On Fence Attempting to Make Landing

Coleman, Mich., May 29 (AP)—Vance Blizzard, 28-year-old student pilot of Midland, Mich., was killed today when the small monoplane he bought three weeks ago crashed on a farm near here.

Blizzard, who took off from the Midland airport this morning, had made one landing about noon in a barley field on the farm of Frank Lundy, three and a half miles east of here, and obtained water for his plane.

After telling Lundy he would return for lunch, he took off, intending to land again in a pasture.

At an altitude of 250 or 300 feet, he banked in preparation for landing and the plane went into a dive. It came down on a fence separating the farms of Lundy and Clark Allison. The tail of the plane rested on the fence and the front of the ship was pierced by a stump. Blizzard was dead when the first of several witnesses to the crash reached the plane.

Blizzard was a garage mechanic at Midland. He was married, but had no children.

a small plane's progress over Ireland, Scotland and northern Ireland seemed to support the belief that Smith actually had crossed the Atlantic and was headed for London.

Smith carried no radio transmitting equipment and confirmation the plane seen as his was impossible. He had a radio receiver, however.

Three reports caused large crowds to gather at London's Croydon airport in momentary expectation of the flier's landing.

At about 5:30 p. m., G. M. T. (12:30 p. m. E.S.T.) a plane was seen over Saint Bees, Cumberland county, England, about 310 miles northwest of London.

The British Press association reported that a tiny silver plane came down to within 100 feet of the ground there and then streaked off south along the coast.

The plane circled over Saint Bees in the Irish Sea. The coast guard, thinking the pilot had lost his way, signalled the letters of the station, to enable the flyer to check his position.

The plane apparently had come directly over the sea from Wigtownshire, on the western tip of Scotland, where a small unfamiliar plane had been sighted at 4:15 p. m. (11:15 a. m. E.S.T.) Previously, at 2:20 p. m. (9:20 a. m., E.S.T.), a similar sighting had been reported at Londonderry, Northern Ireland.

Descriptions Tally

All reports concurred in describing the plane as a small, aluminum colored craft which tallies with Smith's plane.

Smith headed his four-cylinder 65-horse power plane out over the Atlantic without having first obtained permission for such a flight from the civil aeronautics authority in Washington.

He had a screw driver and a single wrench for a tool kit, and although he expected to to be in the air for more than a day and a half, carried only four sandwiches, a couple of chocolate bars, and thermos bottles of water and soft drink. His fuel and oil were said to cost less than $30.

He carried 160 gallons of gas, enough to fly about 3,600 miles at a cruising speed of 100 miles an hour. It was estimated as he took off that he would be able to remain in flight from 36 to 42 hours, depending on wind conditions and other factors.

The distance from Old Orchard Beach to Croydon is 3,100 miles.

Smith, who has been flying nine years despite his relative youth, formerly lived in Clarksburg, W. Va., and has been a pilot for the Detroit-St. Louis-Marquette line.

Headed for Ireland

As Smith took off he did not name a destination. "Europe is as close as I can tell you," he said. Associates thought he would point his tiny monoplane for Slyne Head Ireland, 2,800 miles away.

The last ocean flight except for commercial transports was from Moscow to Miscou Island, N. B., where the Russian flyers Vladimir Kokkinaki and Mikhail Gorienko, were forced down April 28 in an attempt to fly non-stop to New York.

The last previous attempted ocean flight was that of Charles Backman, young Swede who took off from Botwood, Newfoundland, for Sweden, May 16, and has not been reported since. The last successful solo hop was that of Douglas Corrigan, Irish-American pilot who made his famous 'wrong way' flight July 18 of last year, from New York to Dublin, Ireland.

The previous distance record for planes of the type of the "baby Clipper" was 2,447 miles, made by John M. Jones, Nov. 29 and 30, 1938, in a hop from Los Angeles to new York. It had a 50-horsepower motor instead of the 65-horsepower engine in Smith's craft.

While Smith was flying the ocean Clipper, second of the Pan-American airway's 41½ flying boats to span the Atlantic on a regularly-scheduled mail flight, landed almost unheralded at Marseille, France. It had fnown from Lisbon, where it had stopped overnight after flying from New York via the Azores.

GROUND CREW CONFIDENT

Portland, Me., May 29 (AP)—As the "deadline" of the "baby Clipper's" estimated flying time ended tonight without official word that it had been sighted, the tiny monoplane's "ground crew" remained confident that it had flown the Atlantic successfully.

D. A. "Doc" Shannon, Detroit motor worker, and two companions who worked on the plane before Thomas H. Smith, 24, Los Angeles airman, took off from Old Orchard beach at 3:47 a. m. (E. S. T.) yesterday for Europe, estimated he had fuel enough to stay aloft for 37 to 39 hours.

"He's on the ground somewhere," said Shannon hopefully when the 39th hour passed. He expressed belief the "somewhere" was in England.

Shannon and his friends spent the day near a hotel telephone, awaiting word of the flier.

Cruise To Escanaba Is Part Of Program To 'Sell Michigan'

Detroit, May 29. (AP)—Board of Commerce officials announced today the annual cruise to the northern peninsula would concentrate on efforts to "sell Michigan to Michigan tourists."

The cruise will be June 15-19, including a convention aboard ship June 17 at Escanaba of business men, tourist associations, and state officials.

"The idea of the 1939 cruise," said Harvey Campbell, executive secretary of the Detroit board, "is to bring together business men of the state to discuss mutual problems and to sell the Great Lakes region and resorts of Michigan to Michigan tourists."

Kalamazoo Blast Remains Mystery

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 29 (AP)—The cause of two explosions which wrecked the exclusive Park club here Saturday night and injured five persons remained a mystery today although fire and police officials said they had traced the blasts to a storeroom adjoining the kitchen.

All of the five injured persons were reported recovering today.

The first explosion sent a water tank through the roof of the building. A few seconds later a more severe explosion occurred, apparently from ammonia fumes released by the first disturbance.

ination showed a "proper and commendable attitude."

Another influential member of the delegation, Rep. Michener, said the people were "much more interested in a candidate whom the people seek than in a candidate who seeks the job." In the past, he said, there had been no organization behind the Vandenberg boom and the senator repeatedly had discouraged the formation of one.

Kept In Limelight

"Unquestionably," he added, "there will now be an organization of Senator Vandenberg's friends throughout the country."

Vandenberg's statement was a reiteration of the policy which has guided his political career since long before the campaign of 1936. While his leadership in the opposition to New Deal legislation in the senate has kept his name prominently and continuously before the public, he has said repeatedly that he would do nothing himself to obtain the vote of a single delegate to the national convention. To this, he added today the statement that he would not refuse the nomination if it should come to him.

"In my view," he said, "the nomination should flow from the deliberate judgment of a convention wholly free to search out the wisest, surest answers to these critical problems.

"Holding this deep conviction, it would be wholly out of character for me personally to pursue the nomination for myself. It is for the people themselves to speak. No man understanding its difficulties and responsibilities could covet the presidency; and no American could decline it if chosen."

TEXT OF REPLY

Washington, May 29 (AP)—Here is the text of Senator Vandenberg's reply to a suggestion by Michigan Republican officials that he be drafted for the GOP presidential nomination:

Words fail to express my gratitude for this expression of confidence. I shall hope to proceed with whatever responsibilities lie ahead in a manner that may justify these generous opinions. At the moment, these responsibilities require me to announce that I shall be a candidate to succeed myself in the United States senate. If there are subsequent responsibilities of a broader nature, I shall meet them to the best of my ability.

You are good enough to credit me with sincerity in asserting that the next Republican presidential nomination transcends all ordinary quest. The next Republican national convention must first set down clean-cut, constructive, courageous principles which dependably promise to save the American system of free enterprise under the renewed spirit of constitutional democracy, and to recapture prosperity for our whole people under a government restored to solvency. Then it should fit its nominations to its principles.

In my view, it must strive to create common ground upon which all like-thinkers may unite to produce an administration for all Americans in which a pre-pledged, one-term president is manifestly free of all incentive but the one job of saving America. In my view, the nominations should flow from the deliberate judgment of a convention wholly free to search out the wisest, surest answers to these critical problems.

Holding this deep conviction, it would be wholly out of character for me personally to pursue the nomination for myself. It is for the people themselves to speak. No man understanding its diffculties and responsibilities could covet the presidency; and no American could decline it if chosen.

SEA HALTS JOB OF RAISING SUB

Sunken Squalus Will Be Towed to Warmer and Shallower Waters

Portsmouth, N. H., May 29. (AP)—Battling the triple threat of tidal currents, numbing cold and freezing air lines, navy divers tonight completed the first preparatory step of a newly-adopted plan to carry on the salvage of the submarine Squalus in shallower and warmer waters.

The dangers attendant upon bringing the submarine to the surface in one operation, and icy temperature and tremendous pressure at the 240-foot depth at which the Squalus lay caused navy technicians to decide upon a shoreward movement of the hulk in three steps with the aid of huge pontoons.

A messenger line, with its tail of heavy chain, was looped beneath the partly buoyant bow of the submersible, and a survey was made of her mud-imbedded and flooded after section—first steps preparatory to carrying out the new program—before a sudden northeasterly wind whipped up unruly seas and forced suspension of operations.

The undersea work at such a depth was precedent making and navy officials weighed and tested every move to assure the safety of their men.

New Mixture Tested

Chief Machinists Mate William Badders, a veteran of previous submarine disasters, acted as a "human guinea pig" to test the advantages of a helium-oxygen mixture for the divers instead of ordinary compressed air used before the new mixture was developed.

He sat on the Squalus' deck for 52 minutes—an impossible feat if he were expending any energy—showing that while helium froze in the air lines at the deep, cold depths, it allowed a man to stay under water longer than the 20 minutes many officers estimated would be possible with air.

Meanwhile, arrangements were completed for Memorial Day services for the Squalus' dead.

Ashore, the 33 men rescued from the sunken vessel and relatives of those 26 who died in the flooded after compartments arranged to attend services in the Portsmouth navy yard auditorium.

At the last annual convention of the diocese, the standing committee in charge of diocesan affairs reported it was investigating a "discrepancy" in funds. Elliott announced the records had been given without recommendation to Prosecutor John D. Voelker.

FSA REQUIRES GOOD PLANNING

Character and Desire to Cooperate Are Other Factors

The willingness of needy low-income farm families to plan future operations carefully and to accept farm and home management guidance, is the principal basis on which Farm Security Administration loans are made, Carl L. Bennett, local supervisor of Delta County declared in a recent announcement on eligibility requirements of that agency. There are one hundred twelve (112) rehabilitation borrowers of the FSA in this country.

"Our loans are primarily character loans, made only to those who cannot obtain credit elsewhere," he said. "These loans must have character and ability behind them in exactly the same manner as those made in the past through private lending agencies.

Complete rehabilitation of a farm family, after several years of unfavorable crops and prices, may require from five to ten years of sincere effort and careful planning, the supervisor pointed out. The loan itself is incident to such planning, he said.

"The attitude of the family in its relations with the FSA is one of the most important parts of the loans," the supervisor continued. "There must be a sincere desire to cooperate with the FSA and there must be a determination on the part of the family to improve its own condition."

In order to be eligible for a loan the applicant farm family should: (1) understand what caused its need for rehabilitation; (2) realize the necessity for careful planning of future operations; (3) be convinced that progress can be made by following a plan and working hard; (4) keep farm and home records and realize that property mortgaged to the FSA must be accounted for.

The rehabilitation program has been in operation in Delta County for the past four years. In that time, according to Mr. Bennett, there has been $78,258.31 loaned to farmers who needed only a little financial help and guidance to work their way back to a self-supporting and independent basis.

Milwaukee Resident Sentenced To Jail For Drunken Driving

Herbert T. Hanson, Milwaukee, was sentenced by Justice of the Peace Henry E. Ranguette to spend 30 days in the county jail on a charge of driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor.

Hanson was arrested by the sheriff's department after he figured in an automobile collision with another automobile at the junction of US-2-41 and M-69 late Saturday night. The front ends of Hansen's car and the other automobile, owned by John Pilon and driven by Arthur Pilon of Schaffer, were quite badly damaged. No one was injured.

Witnesses said Hanson was driving on the wrong side of the road at a rate of 55 miles per hour.

Rotarians Hear Reports On Meet At Sturgeon Bay

Program highlights and reports of delegates attending the district conference of Rotary Clubs held at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., last week were presented at yesterday's luncheon meeting by M. Robert Deo, Charles Lewis and Edward Edick, the club's representatives at the conference.

Approximately 500 Rotarians from this district were present at the conference to hear such outstanding speakers as Channing Pollock, poet and writer talk on "Where Are We Going?" M. T. Barrow, president of Lawrence college, addressed the general session on "Outlook for Youth" and Preston Bradley spoke on "What Are We Facing?"

All speakers commented along the same lines of thought with the general theme being that we should take heed of present day problems and not cast a too forward looking eye to the future. Channing Pollock told the meeting that this country is passing signs of pending disaster too lightly and that causes and not effects of changing social, political, and economic nature should be observed more keenly.

The next meeting will be held Thursday, June 8, when Rotary will entertain members and parents of graduating seniors of Escanaba and St. Joseph's high schools who are honor students.

ARRIVES HERE FROM PRAGUE

Weinberger Reports Europe Fearful of Another World War

Europe fears another war and is making preparations for it, Herman Weinberger, executive of the Overseas Mercantile company, subsidiary of Skoda of Prague, reported upon his arrival here to visit at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles Gessner, Lake Shore Drive.

Mr. Weinberger has been traveling to most of the countries of Europe, engaged mostly in finding markets for agricultural and food products taken by the Skoda company in exchange for locomotives, machinery and other equipment manufactured by the Prague industrial concern. The Skoda company was jointly owned by French and Czech capital, but since Germany's seizure of Czecho-Slovakia the French interest has been acquired by German capitalists.

The Escanaba visitor was head of the Weinberger company of Berlin, manufacturers and distributors of dairy products, until a couple years ago when he joined the Skoda company. He was in Prague during both crises, the first when the Germans took possession of the Sudenten area and the second, when Hitler's soldiers marched in and assumed full control of Czecho-Slovakia.

War tension was so great in Prague that he decided to leave about a month ago, and went to Amsterdam. In Amsterdam, he found the Hollanders digging trenches and manning the dikes day and night, all prepared to flood the region in the event of invasion. From there, he went to London, where he again found a pessimistic attitude over the outlook for continued peace. Business concerns, believing that war was imminent and would disorganize trade, were reluctant to make any commitments, he said.

"As for myself, I don't look for any war; but, of course, I am always an optimist," Mr. Weinberger said.

SEES NORWAY FAIR EXHIBIT

St. Louis Describes Main Features of Norse Display

BY STANLEY ST. LOUIS

Aboard S. S. Europa—Under the patronage of His Majesty King Haakon VII and their Royal Highnesses Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha the Norwegian Exposition at the New York World's fair ranks with the outstanding foreign displays in originality, attractiveness and interest to the Fair visitor.

ST. LOUIS

It is only natural that the country which gave to the world the doughty Leif Ericksson should still find the sea a main source of support through fishing and shipping. This fact is reflected throughout the entire Norwegian exhibit. Leif Ericksson was walking around on the land of what is now the State of Massachusetts in the year 1001, 491 years before Christopher Columbus set foot on these shores.

One of the first sights to greet the visitor is a model of the famous ship "FRAM", a three masted schooner which has gone further North and also further South than any other ship in the world. It was sailed both by Nansen and Amundsen, Norway's gallant arctic explorers. Clothing and equipment used by both of these men in their dashes to the North and South poles are a part of the display.

Miniature City Shown

A miniature Norwegian city and seaport, complete to the most infinite detail, is, in the opinion of this writer, the most fascinating feature of the entire Worlds' Fair. All of the vast activity of a busy city is faithfully reproduced, and seemingly no item was too small to escape notice. Boats are shown leaving for the fishing banks. Large steamers are being towed towards their piers by tugs. A water plant, complete withdam and falls, is in operation. A man rowing slowly across the harbor in a small boat adds a final touch of reality to the picture. The entire display is powered by electricity, and from a distance of ten feet, any observer would be convinced that he was seeing a real city much as it would appear from the air.

Fox farming in Norway has, in recent years, become an increasingly important source of income. Last year the total number of these animals on Norwegian farms reached the figure of one half million. The most recent experiments have produced what is called the natural platinum fox. This was done by breeding the rare albino fox of northern Norway with the light, silver colored fox.

Only eleven of these rare platinum fox pelts are in existence. One is worn by the Duchess of Windsor and another by Crown Princess Martha of Norway. The rarest and most valuable pelt is on display in the Norwegian pavilion and is said to be worth over $5,000.

A display of pure silver in lumps weighing as much as ninety pounds, and worth as high as $4,750, is presented by the Konesburg Silver Company. These rare pieces of solid silver are in great demand by wealthy collectors of rare mineral formations.

One entire wing of the building is taken up with greatly magnified photographs of scenes in Kristiansand, Tromso, Bergen, Stravanger, Hamar, Haugesand and Sande Fjord. Seeing these pictures is the next best thing to taking a trip to Norway.

Skiing Exhibition

The Norwegian exhibition of skiing would be of great interest to people from the Upper Peninsula of Michigan where the sport has in recent years grown to such popularity. A new type of ski, constructed with a layer of birch wood between two layers of hickory, is on display. This innovation in ski building is warmly endorsed by many famous European ski riders.

In the exhibition of useful arts, handwoven table cloths of fine texture, valued at $150 each, are on display. The Norwegian housewife has little room in her cupboards for mass produced linens and much prefers to weave her own.

If there is any feeling of superiority in the minds of Americans regarding the social progress of their government, a brief visit to the Norwegian government's exhibit would prove very enlightening and educational.

Mottos of Norway

Modern Norway is exemplified by some of the following mottos which form a background for detailed case histories projected in a most intriguing manner for the benefit of the visitor.

1. "Norway the land where democracy works".

2. "Norway the country without illiteracy".

3. "Free speech and a free press are cornerstones of Norwegian liberty".

4. "The Norwegian parliament is elected as one Chamber. Norway has a pure parliamentary form of government".

5. "Norway has a free democratic constitution. Universal suffrage and the right to hold public office for all men and women".

6. "Work for the people's health is a national problem. Sickness and accident insurance are mileposts in this work. Sickness insurance is compulsory".

7. "The Labor Protection law grants a working woman who is having a child relief with pay six weeks before and after the child is born".

8. "Even if the municipality does not guarantee work and daily bread in the future it can at all events give to youth that strength and self esteem which the knowledge of being capable at a trade can give a man".

9. "The municipality provides a country holiday for children. No child need stay behind in the streets. Those who cannot get away on their own account receive free board and lodging at the summer colony".

Our national capital is called the city of beautiful parks and buildings. Norwegians call Oslo, their capital. "The city of high social endeavor".

Kiwanians Hear Inspiring Address By Norway Pastor

An impressive Memorial Day observance address was delivered by Rev. Frank Peterson of Norway at the meeting of the Kiwanis club at the Sherman hotel Monday noon.

Rev. Peterson traced the development of the Memorial Day observance from 1867 when the graves of Confederate and Union soldiers were decorated at Columbus, Miss. He also dwelt upon the significance of today's nationwide observance, pointing out that while we revenently pay tribute to the soldier dead we should also honor the living, who are devoting their lives to the service of mankind.

The speaker, who was introduced by Al Johnson of Bark River, commented favorably upon the work that the Kiwanis club is doing for the benefit of underprivileged children, adding that such welfare programs are the display of true Christian brotherhood.

Various business matters of the Kiwanis club were transacted at yesterday's meeting. Announcement was made by B. W. Phillips that the Kid Kar Klassic would be held at Ludington park 6:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, June 14. A communication from the Escanaba Youth Council, asking the Kiwanis club to again help in the Camp Bidiban project, was turned over to the boys and girls work committee.

Board members are elected only as trustees. At the regular organization meeting held the first Monday in July, officers are elected to serve throughout the year.

FIRST SIGNS OF 'HOPPERS SEEN

Farmers Urged to Ask Supervisors for Bait Blanks

With the arrival of the first lively, little, green grasshoppers over the week end, County Agricultural Agent E. A. Wenner yesterday urged all farmers to fill out blanks immediately requisitioning for poison bait.

The blanks have been placed in the hands of township supervisors and farmers are asked to declare their intentions of using the bait as quickly as possible.

Two years ago, the county experienced one of its heaviest crops of grasshoppers in many years. At that time, the poison bait was used extensively and last year the small foragers were bad only in spots in the county, especially Maple Ridge and Garden townships. As a result, many farmers in other parts of the county did not bother to get the bait. It is likely that the grasshoppers will break out in these other areas this year.

Werner said yesterday that farmers should make a careful check of their fields frequently and, immediately upon finding signs of the 'hoppers, they should apply poison bait. In view of the fact that the insects migrate quite rapidly, it is the duty of every farmer to do what he can to stop them in order to prevent their damaging other sections of the county.

Streamliner Does Well

THE Milwaukee Road reports that the Hiawatha, crack streamliner operating between Chicago and the Twin Cities, netted $2.68 a train mile during 1938, while gross earnings amounted to $4.15 a train mile.

Since inauguration of the service five years ago, the Hiawatha and its overflow sections, operated frequently to meet traffic demands, have carried 1,185,000 paying passengers, an average of 800 daily.

The Milwaukee Road also operates a fast train, the Chippewa, which has been receiving a good patronage on its run between Chicago and Channing. Quite a number of Escanaba residents, who have been going over to Iron Mountain to avail themselves of the Chippewa train service, now are turning, however, to the Cloverland, the faster train installed on the Ishpeming-Chicago run by the North Western railway.

What the Milwaukee Road and other carriers have done in the past few years demonstrates that the railroads can recapture the passenger traffic that has been lost in the past. The dangers and discomfort of driving one's automobile over long distances are factors that will induce the average person to choose rail travel if a reasonably fast and comfortable service is provided.

Sometimes Necessary

SOME folks may have thought that Judge Runnels was quite severe when he imposed stiff jail sentences recently upon some young men, who had been convicted of breaking and entering into summer cottages in their community.

But there are times when the courts must be stern in order to provide an example for those persons, who think pranks are a lot of fun but do not realize the annoyance they may be causing others. Folks who build and maintain cottages devote much time to their property and acquire a sentimental interest in it because it has developed into a sort of hobby for them.

The same thing holds true for those folks who pursue the hobby of gardening. A number of Escanaba homeowners have complained in the past that youthful and adult vandals have trespassed upon their gardens, stolen flowers and done other damage. The flowers and other plants probably do not have much material value, but for those who have planted and cared for them there is an esthetic value attached that money cannot buy.

The arrest and prosecution of a few of these marauders might do much to curb such acts of vandalism.

Hostel Established

MENOMINEE and Marinette have taken the lead among communities in this section in the establishment of a link in the hostel system that is envisaged as eventually looping Lake Michigan.

Accommodations for about twenty young persons have been provided in the lodge rooms of the Oakland club along the shores of Green bay at Marinette. From this hostel site, the youthful sojourners may take bicycle, hiking and boating trips.

The Menominee River hostel is affiliated with the National Youth Hostel association. The rate for an overnight stay will be 25 cents a hosteler. Proper supervision of the hostel has been arranged for.

Hosteling is a form of travel and recreationfi originating in Europe but growing in popularity in this country. It is especially popular in New England, where an extensive system of hostels has been established. Its growth in Michigan will depend upon what is done to make available the type of accommodations and services the hostelers are given elsewhere.

Progressing Slowly

THE land zoning movement in Michigan has been proceeding slowly, but it is probably best that caution be exercised so that all possible mistakes may be avoided and a workable system for restricting land use be put into effect.

Land zoning was authorized in this state when the 1935 legislature passed the Luecke-Odell bill, which permits counties to draft zoning ordinances after approval is given by the people at the polls. The movement for land zoning was inspired in Delta county, but Marquette was the first county to have its ordinance approved by the state planning commission. Delta very likely will be the second for its ordinance comes up before the commission in Lansing. Only two other counties in the state—Dickinson and Menominee—have had zoning proposals approved in referenda.

Public interest in land zoning is probably not what it should be, simply it is a more or less technical question and the average person does not often confront the problems which zoning seeks to correct. Officials associated with governmental agencies, however, can perceive the extra tax burdens that have been imposed upon the people through unwise settlement of families in the past.

Rural zoning is going through the same pioneering stage as was once experienced by the urban zoning idea. City residents can see many reasons why urban zoning is a good thing for the safeguarding of property values, reduction of five hazards and the raising of living standards. Rural zoning promises similar benefits, but they are not so discernible just now.

How Much Freedom?

ALWAYS the perpetual problem — how much freedom?

All, every bit of it, that modern life will stand, is the answer of the liberal.

But between freedom and modern life there is an essential conflict. The term needs constant redefinition. For instance, automobiles are a part of modern life. Every man ought to have the right to drive one if he can get it. Yet—it is certainly unwise to allow him to drive it while drunk, or when physically unit, or when the car itself lacks brakes or a proper steering gear.

Seventeen states now require motor vehicle inspection, the International Association of Police Chiefs reports. The freedom to drive a car is subordinated to the freedom of others to be reasonably safe on the roads. Almost every instance of freedom today must be subjected to the same test: as much freedom as does not conflict with a like freedom for others.

BILLBOARD LICENSING?
(Milwaukee Journal)

Under Bill 808-A, introduced in the legislature by the committee on taxation, the billboard industry would be licensed, with a fee required for each display board.

Thus the outdoor advertising business would be taken into a sort of partnership with the state, its billboards definitely would be legalized, its use of the public highways environs approved.

The bill also would repeal Section 342,-482 of the statutes. That section prohibits the erection of billboards within 1,000 feet of highway intersections.

Bill 808-A, of course, sets up regulations ostensibly controlling billboards. Some of them perhaps are good, though not particularly restrictive. Others of them would permit the boards within 200 feet of highway intersections instead of keeping them 1,000 feet away, and would permit erection of boards within 50 feet of the right of way.

Billboard regulation is a difficult matter. Until the people more definitely know what they want to do about billboards, it seems unwise to enact laws that clearly sanction them. Specific prohibitions, to protect highway intersections and other specified areas, seem safer. Beyond that, zoning regulations might keep the boards from obstructing fine views or cluttering up the roadsides.

Eastern courts have rendered decisions indicating that the people have broad legal rights over their roadsides, views and scenery. The courts have held that billboards may be restricted for the protection of any of these factors. No Wisconsin legislature ought to enact laws that might, by conferring specific rights or privileges on outdoor advertisers, hamper these rights of the people.

The probabilities are that a large majority of Wisconsin's people do not want billboards at all in coountry districts, by the sides of rural roads, or looming countrysiles. Legislation ought to trend towward increasing protection in these directions. Bill 808-A does not do that. Instead, it imposes fees and confers privileges. The bill ought to be killed.

MILLIONS SAVED
(N. Y. World-Telegram)

Since the government now is financing all extra expenditures on borrowed money, the defeat of the Florida ship canal may be no matter of great moment to the taxpayers of today.

But the taxpayers of the future, upon whom the extravagances of their fathers will be visited, will have reason to rejoice that at least one project was disapproved—especially since it is a project of slight value and one which would have cost from $200,000,000 to $500,000,000 to construct and countless more millions annually to maintain. Those millions, plus interest to the day of reckoning, would amount to big money in any generation.

EACH IN HIS OWN TONGUE
(St. Louis Post-D'spatch)

Says Prime Minister Chamberlain: "If we could have a renunciation of aggressive aims, we would not be backward in stating the lines on which we would discuss the terms of a permanent peace."

Says Dr. Goebbels: "There is no better argument than weapons."

Says Secretary Hull: "There must be an end to the attempt to substitute for fair discussion the threat of stronger arms."

Says Mussolini: "A treaty of alliance between Italy and Germany will form a bloc 150,000,000 men, against which it will be impossible to do anything."

In short, the modern Babel, and not an interpreter in s!ght.

AGAIN DETROIT LEADS
(Detroit Free Press)

The automotive industry takes first rank for the seventh consecutive year, among consumers of steel in the United States.

Almost 17 per cent of all steel produced in this country goes into automobile vehicles.

The following figures show the tonnage of steel used by various important industries in the United States in 1938:

Industry	Gross Tons	Percentage
Automotive ____	3,155,906	16.88
Construction ___	2,762,334	14.77
Containers _____	1,854,900	9.92
Railroads _____	1,215,364	6.51
Oil, Gas & Water	941,641	5.04
Machinery _____	663,041	3.55

An examination of these figures reveals both pleasant and unpleasant facts.

The pre-eminence of the automotive industry as a steel consumer is due more to the decline in the demand for steel by other industries than to an increased demand for steel by its own factories.

The building and construction industry is only now beginning to pick up after scraping the bottom of depression.

And the railroads, formerly among the largest buyers of steel, are not financially able to hold up their end as leading customers of the steel makers.

The one pleasant fact about the steel industry in 1938 was that the automotive plants, which mean so much to the Detroit industrial area, were able to lead all other consumers in absorbing the products of the country's great basic industry and thus providing employment for tens of thousands of men in mines and steel mills.

DECLINE OF PACIFISM
(Baltimore Sun)

Senator Borah admits that he can see no way of phrasing a war-referendum amendment so as to make it practical. The senator from Idaho is as strongly isolationist as ever, but isolationism is one thing and risking defeat is another. Recent events, especially in Czecho-Slovakia, Memel and Albania, have shown that it is possible for aggressor nations to move at high speed. If the United States were unable to fire a shot until the people had voted in favor of war, we might find our position seriously prejudiced before we had finished counting the ballots.

This is an aspect of the matter which many Americans refused to take seriously until Hitler and Mussolini began to march; but everybody is taking it seriously now. The result is a marked subsidence of theoretical pacifism.

EXTENDED PALMS
(Kansas City Journal)

A bloc of senators from the silver-producing states are preparing to demand that the pegged price of silver be increased from 64.64 cents an ounce to 77.57 cents. The frank purpose is to boom the silver mining industry.

The only effect of the silver price laws has been to boom one industry at the expense of the rest of the country and to give politicians from the silver states something to boast about to their constituents. Unless congress is willing to render similar service to the oil, coal, peanut, asbestos and any and all other industries, it should drop the silver policy before it establishes a precedent too big to handle.

World Affairs Reviewed

BY MILTON BRONNER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

London—Greater London, which sprawls over 600 acres and contains about 8,000,000 people, will become a deserted village in events of war.

This will be instriking contrast to conditions which prevailed in the British metropolis during the last world war. Then London was occasionally raided by German planes and Zeppelins, scores of people were killed and hundreds of others were injured, but there was no widespread slaughter and no wholesale destruction by explosion, fire and gas. And life went on as usual in London.

But the gigantic air forces of Germany and Italy, coupled with the immense punishing power huge bombs have will make the possible London of the possible next war quite a different place.

Life will not go on as usual. Theaters and movies all probably will be closed, so that great masses of people will not be crowded in certain vulnerable localities. Buses will disappear from the streets, so that the gasoline may be saved for more vital needs. Travel will be largely by the underground railway, by foot, and by bicycle.

—WIDESPREAD EXODUS WILL DRAIN CITY—

The population of wartime London will be due to many factors: Sooner or later, if Britain has a war, conscription will be put into force and this will take at least 500,000 of the younger men away to training camps and battlefields.

And during the war scare of last fall, plans were made to evacuate into the country 500,000 school children and another 500,000 younger children together with their mothers. These children and women will be billetted upon everybody who has a house. The government itself also proposes to build shelter camps. At least 250,000 more people, who have friends and relatives living outside of London, will betake themselves away from the metropolis. It is also probable that, if air raids continue in intensity, the government will evacuate at least 2,000,000 adult civilians who are not performing essential services.

—GOVERNMENT OFFICES WILL SCATTER—

The government is building immensely strong air raid shelters underneath the various government office buildings in Whitehall. But these are intended to shelter only skeleton forces.

The main body of civil servants with the under-secretaries of state and the responsible cabinet officers would be elsewhere. Where they will be is naturally one of the most closely guarded governmental secrets. It is very probable the big departments would not be located in the same town. It is more probable that the Home Office would be situated in one city and the War Department in a town some 150 or 200 miles away.

But all the government departments will be interlinked by telephone and telegraph communications and also with the office of the Prime Minister, wherever that may ultimately be. Similarly there will be arrangements for calling Parliament together outside London if necessary.

The City—London's Wall Etreet — is prepared for emergencies. The great banking, insurance and shipping concerns will, I am informed, largely scatter to small towns in Wales and Scotland.

New York—A confidant of Mary Pickford's told me that besides her Hollywood interests, America's Sweetheart also derives quite an income from: (1) a cosmetics outfit, (2) an electric sign patent and (3) various real estate projects—and that she attends to her varied business interetss personally.

VERY MAD KITTY

So Katharine Hepburn is mad at the fan magazines. She told an interviewer who relayed it to me that she finally was fed up with the embarrassing questions asked by filmland's fan writers and refused to submit to any more. Which is why they began to brand her as "high-hat" and "haughty."

The Hepburn girl, by the way, goes directly from her successful play, "The Philadelphia Story," every Saturday night to the family hearth at Hartford, which is up Connecticut way, and doesn't return until Monday.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY PEARSON AND ALLEN

Washington—There was a very pointed sock at Jack Garner in the President's speech to the American Retail Federation.

Only insiders in the know were aware of it, for Roosevelt made the jab at his leading Democratic foe by using one of the laters's pet expressions. It was the word "hunch", a favorite in the Garner dictionary.

The Presidential slap was in the early part of the speech, as follows:

"How shall we produce more customers with more money? One school of thought is what I call the school of the gamblers. You find some of them in every community, as well as in Wall Street, and some of them, the political variety, even in the halls of Congress . . . . That school tion and of our system of private entertion and of our syste mof private enterprise on nothing more than their personal hunch that if government will just keep its hands off the economic system, customers will just happen. . . .

"These people who are playing the 'it can happen' hunch today are actually the wildest-eyed radicals in our midst, because despite proved failures they want to gamble on their own hunch once more."

—WALLACE'S EXPERIMENTS—

They do a lot of strange things in the Department of Agriculture. Try pushing open the door marked "Animal Room" on the fourth floor. We did, the other day, and found a big furnace in which a police dog was being cremated.

An attendant in white opened the furnace door and revealed what was left of the carcass, being consumed by two jets of gas flame.

"Rabies," he said. "Police brought him in this morning. Bit somebody. They shot him and brought the body to us. We took out the brain for microscopic test, also prepared a serum for a white-mouse test, and this is all that's left."

The victim of that dog-bite will not get rabies, because the tests may prove that the dog was not mad; but if they prove otherwise, the wictim can take the Pasteur treatment and be cured.

Meanwhile the attendant was busy with an anthrax test. He had a guinea pig in one hand, an electric razor in the other. He shaved the belly of the squeaking "pig", put him down, grabbed another by the scruff of the neck and shaved him in like manner.

He polished off the bare spot with a piece of cotton. Then with a hypodermic needle he injected a fluid into the bellies of the "pigs". He tossed them back into a pail with a piece of cabbage, and their squealing ceased.

The room is full of guinea pigs, white mice, white rats, rabbits, and chickens. It is full of squawks, and squeals, and cackles. But in the midst of the confusion, science marches on.

—TOUGH LOBBY—

High-powered business lobbies are an old story on Capitol Hill, but they have nothing on the CIO. It has perfected one of the smoothest pressure machines in the history of lobbying.

The AFL endeavors to sway votes by the old method of having President William Green issue a statement, while state and local Federation heads send telegrams. But not the CIO. When it puts on the heat, Senators and Congressmen don't get just a few messages, they get them by the thousands. Through a nationwide organization of local groups, CIO officials in Washington can produce within 24 hours a deluge of letters and wires from voters who sign legitimate names and addresses. In addition, local delegations can be quickly mobilized and rushed to Washington for personal buttonholing.

Members of Congress have learned to have a wholesome respect for the CIO lobby. Privately, some of them don't like it, but they keep their opinions to themselves. It's risky to do otherwise.

—NAVY RED TAPE—

Navy Department red tape passeth all understanding.

During the rescue of survivors of the Squalus a newsman telephoned the Naval press room and inquired if any reports had been received from the scene of operations.

"Oh, yes," replied the woman clerk, "lots is happening. Messages are coming in all the time."

"Fine. What do they say?"

"I can't tell you that."

"Why not?" demanded the reporter. "What's all the secrecy about? Aren't the reports for publication?"

"Oh, certainly," was the sugary answer, "but I can't give them out. The girl who does that is out to lunch and you'll have to wait until she returns. Call her back in about an hour."

—MAIL BAG—

L. H., Granville, O.—No definite policy has been adopted as yet regarding the possible emigration of American unemployed to Brazil. The matter was discussed by Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian Foreign Minister, while in Washington last winter, but no action has been taken either by Congress or Roosevelt . . . . E. C., New York—It has been estimated that 40 per cent of American workers today are employed in industries which did not exist 40 years ago—chiefly automobiles motion pictures, radio, internal combustion engines, etc.

WE, the WOMEN

BY RUTH MILLETT

The world is full of good, well-meaning hostesses. But the woman who can keep a guest happy and entertained for a whole week-end is a rare creature.

She doesn't work any harder than the less successful hostess—often not as hard—but she realizes what things are important to guests, and sees that they have those things.

She puts comfort first, and her guest room has all the creature comforts, a good bed light for reading, extra cover folded on the bed, an empty closet well supplied with hangers, a clock; a jug of ice water, and, of course, a comfortable bed.

She knows that nothing makes a guest more ill-at-ease than feeling that he is causing a lot of trouble. And so she does whatever work she has to do without fuss and strain. And she doesn't cluck over her guests comfort like a hen looking out for a weak chick.

In handy and tempting places, she scatters magazines and new books, knowing that if he has something interesting to read no guest is going to mind his hostess' leaving him to do her work.

NOT "MECHANICAL" ABOUT HER PLANS

She has planned the weekend thoughtfully so that there is plenty to do, but not enough to wear her guest out. However, she doesn't cling grimly to her plans if something better turns up.

She doesn't chatter continually, but gives her guest a chance to talk. And she isn't afraid of long silences when everyone seems happy and contented, just relaxing.

Lighting the whole weekend is her real pleasure in having a person she likes under her roof. Her whole attitude is "It's so nice to have you here." If she knows it—she doesn't have to say it.

Escanaba Golf Club Honors Its Founders Last Night At Silver Jubilee Dinner Dance

One of the most successful affairs in the history of the Escanaba Golf club was the Silver Jubilee dinner dance last evening at which the club, observing the twenty-fifth anniversary of its organization, honored its founders and twenty-five year members.

The dinner which was served to 170 club members and their guests was beautifully appointed. A tiered birthday cake centered the table at which the guests of honor were seated, with bowls of peonies and white tapers in silver holders completing the decorative scheme, and the same theme was used in the tables throughout the rooms with white vases of flowers of varied shades and similar tapers.

The dinner program opened with introductory remarks by H. H. Shepeck, president of the club, whose entertaining talk was marked by witty and clever anecdotes.

J. E. Byrns, toastmaster, gave a resume of the history of the club, touching on the highlights of its development, its organization in 1914, with F. E. King the first president, and Dr. Harry W. Long, the first secretary-treasurer; the organization of the Escanaba Country club in 1916, with the late W. W. Oliver, president and a year later, its incorporation into the Escanaba Golf club.

T. M. Judson, whom Mr. Byrns introduced as the "dean of charter members," recalled incidents of the early days of the club.

"The Escanaba Golf club stands out," Mr. Judson declared. "It is a part of Escanaba and it has helped make Escanaba what it is today."

Tribute to Leaders

John P. Norton, also speaking of the first years of the club and its development, paid tribute to two men whose generous contributions of time, funds and energy are inseparately linked with the progress of the organization, the late George M. Mashek and Charles F. Glavin.

Dr. Harry W. Long, whose brief talk also dealt with the early days of golfing in Escanaba, spoke of two champions, Dr. Donald Boyce, who first appeared on the course as a boy, accompanying his father, the late Dr. W. B. Boyce, and Con J. Driscoll.

Other speakers were J. R. Andrews, Dr. C. B. Kitchen, C. B. Farrell, Con Driscoll and Herbert J. Rushton.

Mr. Byrns, in concluding, spoke in appreciation of the officers, directors and committees of the club, and of their splendid cooperation, mentioning in particular, Mr. and Mrs. Cotton Leonard and Robert O'Neill, chairman of the dinner dance.

Group singing, led by Woody Doxtaker, accordionist, and the closing song, "Auld Lang Syne," led by Mrs. H. J. Defnet, were music features of the program.

Guests of Honor

The guests of honor included J. R. Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Judson, Mr. and Mrs. M. K. Bissell, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Byrns, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Driscoll, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Farrell, A. H. Groesbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Jackson, Dr. C. J. B. Kitchen, Dr. and Mrs. A. S. Kitchen, Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Long, Mrs. G. M. Mashek, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Noreus, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Norton, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Schuldes, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Shepeck, M. N. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Stegath.

Dancing with music by Eddie Gunkel and his band followed the dinner.

The committee on arrangements was: C. R. Leonard, professional; Wm. J. Schmidt, secretary-treasurer; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. O'Neill, chairmen; Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Harvey, co-chairmen; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Henry Fords On Lady Lindsay's Preferred List

By Esther Van Wagoner Tufty (Washington Correspondent)

Washington, May 29—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford are the only Michiganders who belong to the new Four Hundred socially great. In other words, they are among "the 400" out-of-towners invited to have a dish of tea with Their Majesties, the King and Queen of Great Britain at a garden party at the British embassy on June 8.

If there are others from Michigan who have been "made socially" by receiving the highly coveted crested card, Lady Lindsay, wife of the British ambassador, did not name them at her press conference. I rattled off the names of several of those socially tops back home, but the Czarina of the invitation list knew them not. Furthermore, she firmly refuses to publish the names of her chosen four hundred.

Very British

Now the original Four Hundred of New York (no more would fit in Mrs. Astor's ballroom) was ruled by early American dowagers. Not this one—this is blessed by merry old England. Of course, Lady Lindsay is American born, but more British than the British. One feels that only her training in diplomatic circles keeps her from being apologetic about her origin.

Three other Michiganders, not in the "400" but identified as "local" and "official" will have a chance to curtsy or bow to royalty at the garden party, which the ambassador himself describes as "similar to Heaven where some get in others do not."

Michigan's former red-headed Irish governor now seated in America's royal cabinet, Frank Murphy, will be there and also at the White House dinner given by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt for Their Majesties. Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg will be at the garden party although by no means are all senators included. His membership on the senate foreign relations committee lets him and his wife within the celestial portals.

Dewey Not Invited

It's amusing and typical of British stupidity and in this admittedly good-will event, they omit the name of a possible next president of the United States—Thomas E. Dewey of New York. To make the omission more glaring most of the other talked-about candidates are invited, including Senators Robert A. Taft and Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. Neither of these are on the foreign relations committee and were asked as "friends." The Democratic maybe candidates come as "official."

And just as everyone is completely fed up with the "snooty" Lady Lindsay she becomes a truly witty person and tempers our temper. In her garden—the substitute for Buckingham Palace—she points out a pink-yellow rose named the "honorable Lady Lindsay." Laughingly she describes the bush as "stout and very thorny."

Baccalaureate At St. Joseph's Is Impressive

Baccalaureate services of St. Joseph's high school graduating class, inaugurating commencement activities, were held at the nine o'clock mass at St. Joseph's church Sunday morning. Rev. Fr. Edward Leary, O. F. M., was celebrant of the mass, and the baccalaureate sermon was delivered by Rev. Fr. Joseph; E. Guertin, pastor of St. Anne's church.

A processional from the school to the church, led by ushers in purple and gold regalia, in which the members of the three other classes served as an escort of honor to the seniors, preceded the mass.

"Festival March" was played as the procession entered the church, and during the Pentecostal Mass, the entire student body sang "'Tis the Hour of Prayer," "I Need Thee, Gracious Jesus," "We Thee Adore," and "Our Lady of Good Counsel."

Rev. Fr. Guertin's text was "Let your hearts rejoice and be not afraid," from the Gospel of the Feast of Pentecost. The speaker paid tribute to the parents and to the candidates for graduation, stating that the seniors had received in St. Joseph's school, a complete education, that of mind, heart and soul, and that the parents had performed their duty to their children, as God had willed it. He closed with kindly admonitions and sincere words of encouragement.

Guests at Banquet

Following the recessional at the close of the mass, the students returned to the school where a breakfast was served by the juniors to members of the graduating class. The tables were simply but attractively decorated. Each senior found at his place, a hand-painted place card with his photograph, and also a small diploma which contained the special invitation for the social at which the juniors entertained in honor of the graduating group.

WANT TO BET ON IT?

Now, about this gambling business. In his speech last Monday day night the President accused the critics of his fiscal policies (among them "high-brow columnists and high-geared economists") of being "eager to gamble the safety of the nation." The New Deal, he said, is conservative. "We cannot bring ourselves to take radical chances with other people's property. . . We do not have the right to gamble with the well-being of 120,000,000 Americans."

Dorothy Thompson

This statement would seem to indicate that the New Deal has, and has had, a consistent policy arrived at without benefit of high-brow columnists and high-geared economists and that that policy has worked, and, therefore, the New Deal is sticking to it.

• • •

Actually, the New Deal has had three separate policies, each of which has been winsomely presented to the public, and each of which has had the support of some high-geared economists and some high-geared columnists—if you count my friend Heywood Broun as a high-brow! Heywood has believed in the infallibility of all three of them.

• • •

There are radical differences in all of these policies put forward by an Administration which takes its name, the New Deal, from a gambling game. The New Deal has staked its money—I mean our money—on all three hands. And they can't possibly, all three, be winners in the same round.

The first was the fiscal policy enunciated in the special economy message of March 10, 1933. At this time Mr. Roosevelt was implementing his criticisms of the Hoover regime's waste and deficit policies.

"We shall have piled up from the preceding fiscal years an accumulated deficit of $5,000,000,000. . . . It has contributed to the recent collapse of our banking structure. . . . Too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy . . . I give you assurance that if this is done (proposed economy legislation) there is reasonable prospect that within a year the income of the government will be sufficient to cover the expenditures of government."

This is Mr. Roosevelt talking the language of high-geared conservative economists. Lewis Douglas and Dr. B. M. Anderson, of the Chase Bank, and high-browed columnist, Mark Sullivan.

But on January 3, 1934, the President had decided to put his money (our money) on another hand. This budget message was inspired by the theory of such high-geared liberal economists as Russell Leffingwell, of Morgan's.

Now, the President adopted the idea of the cyclical budget — the idea of compensatory government spending. The proposed increase in the deficit was to be so arranged and conditioned as to accelerated recovery and secure a balance within the business cycle.

"We should plan to have a definitely balanced budget for the third year of recovery, 1936, and from that time on seek a continuing reduction of the debt."

In the second budget message, of January 3, 1935, the President noted the continuing problem of unemployment and said:

"For this reason it is evident that we have not yet reached a point at which a complete balance can be obtained . . . I am, however, submitting to the Congress a budget for the fiscal year of 1936 . . . Such deficit as occurs may be expected to decline." . . .

In the message of January 3, 1936, he congratulated himself on the success of his policy.

"Our policy is succeeding. The figures prove it. Secure in the knowledge that steadily decreasing deficits will turn, in time, to steadily increasing surpluses . . . let us pursue the course we have mapped."

The year closed six months later with a record-breaking deficit of $4,361,000,000.

On January 8, 1937, there was another optimistic budget message.

"Business conditions have shown each year a marked improvement . . . the gains make it possible to reduce for 1938 many expenditures. . . . We expect in 1939 a completely balanced budget."

Immediately following this message the government embarked upon a drastic deflationary policy not radically reducing spending but increasing three times the Federal Reserve requirements and sterilizing gold.

This move was supported by conservative high-geared economist Winthrop Aldrich and by high-geared liberal economists Parker Gilbert, of Morgan's, and Alexander Sachs, of Lehman Corporation. Mr. Morgenthau also looked a little sour.

Low- or high-browed columnist Dorthy Thompson and others predicted a depression, on the argument that the deflation was wildly drastic, that it was a mistake to undertake it unless accompanied by the release of capital, a radical change in the tax structure, and a revival of business confidence, which had been seriously, though indirectly shaken by the attack on the Supreme Court.

Columnists were reprimanded for pessmiism.

There was a depression, eventually admitted by the government.

In January, 1938, a new policy takes form. The budget is going to be balanced when and if the national income has grown to the "requisite amount." High-geared economists, some of whom supported policies 1 and 2, are notably absent in expressions of enthusiasm for No. 3.

High-brow columnists who saw merit in 1 and 2 are almost all "from Missouri" on 3.

Just what the proper national income ought to be at which the budget will be balanced is not clear. High-geared economist Paul M. Sweezy thinks $100,000,000,000 would be "an immediate goal," and that "one cannot expect business men to undertake the necessary investments; the risks are too large." (Too much of a gamble.)

The President, in his speech to the retailers (no bargain basement), suggests $80,000,000,000—to be achieved by pumping in "purchasing power."

And the budget for 1940, presented before the Congress on January 7, 1939, contains a table showing the revenues that would result from existing taxation if there should be advances in national income:

"Seventy billions means $6,000,000,000 revenue: $80,000,000,000; $90,000,000,000 (we have never had it) would produce $10,600,000,000." . . .

The high-geared economist and commentator who first though up this idea was named Ellis Parker Butler, and he called the description of the system "Pigs Is Pigs."

Unfortunately, wealth is not produced by parturition, as in guinea pigs.

Now, there is nothing except bright hope to indicate that this last certainty will not be much the most serious gamble.

Either policy 1 or policy 2 could have succeeded, had it been followed consistently and intelligently by the Administration, or had either been fully comprehended in the first place and the whole conditions taken into account.

Paul Reynaud has in general followed policy 1 in bringing into order the finances of the French produced by Blum's French New Deal.

The British recovery—at a high scale of taxation and revenue—was achieved by this policy.

The Swedish and Australian governments adopted the cyclical budget and compensatory spending idea (policy 2) with success, but in an ordered and rational fashion. They were clear-

● SERIAL STORY

DATE WITH DANGER

BY HELEN WORDEN

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday: Mary Franklin warns Clem about Martin. Later, Clem quarrels with Jack and vows she'll give him something to be jealous about. She reaches for the telephone.

CHAPTER XVII

After Mary said goodby to Clem and Jack she went to the office.

She was worried about Clem. Clem was too nice a girl to crack up. Something must be done. But when she reached the newspaper the only solution she had arrived at was to look up Duke Martin and warn him once more that he could not break Clem.

The Gazette was caught in the doldrums of mid-afternoon. An indolent calm hung over the city desk. Crossie was sprawled in his swivel chair, green eye-shade pushed on top of his head, smoking a pipe and gossiping with Mel Anderson, a copy desk man. Mel had large and gentle brown eyes and liked to talk about bees. At the rewrite desks, the men, with the hard part of the day's writing done, had taken off their earphones and were swapping yarns about their favorite subject—betting on the ponies.

Even the financial section, usually the noisiest department in the city room, was quiet. The ticker had closed at three and Dan Perkins had gone out. He furnished the comic relief for the office by engaging in long, complicated arguments with Si Marlin, the stock exchange reporter.

The atmosphere of peace did not extend, however, to the office of the managing editor.

Two paragraphs in the Star's gossip column had upset him. Leaning back in his swivel chair, his long legs stretched beneath the desk, Tom Ladd had prepared for an afternoon's quiet review of the news when his eye fell on Mary Franklin's name in Burt's Night Club column.

"Looks as if the Gazette's soc. ed., Mary Franklin, was serious about James Shirley, prexy of the International Brake Co. . . . She's a pal of Shirley's deb daughter, Clem. There's gold in that family."

A blind rush of hatred welled up in Ladd. It was rather cheap of Mary to act this way. Not to tell him. His mind was seething. She was going to hang on to her job till she got married. He could see it all now. He could have seized Shirley by the throat and strangled him. Then he stopped suddenly. He hardly knew the man, only vaguely remembered what he looked like. Just as suddenly the anger left him. He became despondent. Why shouldn't Mary like another man?

Ladd picked up the Star again. This time his eye traveled further down Burt's column. Another paragraph caught his attention. He studied it sharply, reached for his clipping shears, snipped it out, then rang for Pete, the copy boy.

"Tell Miss Franklin I want to see her at once." There was grimness in his tone.

Mary had just lifted the top of her desk and was slipping the typewriter into place. Her neighbor, the religious editor, better known as the Parson, seemed to be the only other person actually working.

"Good afternoon," he said, as she settled in her chair. "Glad to see you. The office is brighter when you're here."

The Parson was a strange soul with a hazy past. Many stories were told about him. Some said he'd been a bishop who'd been defrocked. He still wore the white clerical collar and black ministerial dicky, but otherwise his churchly background did not show. He swore constantly, his deep voice booming with rough cordiality, as it slipped over oaths. When he spoke to Mary his large, pink, clean shaven face dissolved into an amiable lump of putty. A monkish fringe of white hair rimmed his bald pink head.

He reminded Mary of Friar Tuck. He had the same Rabelaisian delight in spicy jokes, pretty women and comfortable living. His little blue eyes, round as gooseberries, twinkled as he talked.

"A press agent doesn't know the meaning of the word 'no,'" he fumed, turning to answer a phone call. "I'll bet this is the fellow who boosts the old fool that preaches at—"

But Mary was never to learn the name of the minister who had a press agent. Pete, the copy boy, came running up to say Tom Ladd wanted to see her.

Eagerly she left her desk. You could see by the expression in her eyes that she had more than affection for this battling managing editor. She smiled as she entered Ladd's office.

"Did you want to talk with me?"

She wondered why she cared for him. He had never shown any personal interest in her aside from that morning he took her to the Plaza for breakfast, and even then his attentions were only casually pleasant.

This afternoon that casual pleasantness was missing.

"What about this?" he demanded abruptly, handing her a clipping from a Broadway column.

She had to exercise all her self-control to disregard the sharpness in his voice. Glancing down the column she read:

"Who is the hot little debutante ski-ing around Chinatown and Oh, so elsewhere, with Duke Martin? What has happened when Harvard can't compete with Lovey Dove?"

"Who is the girl?" he demanded.

"It isn't news," said Mary defiantly. She began to lose her temper. One moment she found herself loving this man, another moment she was hating him.

"I'm judge of what's news around here," he shouted. "If we're going to be beaten up by that puss-puss columnist of the Star, I'll get a reporter who can give me the stuff. Who is the girl?"

"Clem Shirley."

Her words made him pause. He looked at her sharply. "Pete," he called, "Get me the clips on Clem Shirley."

Warned by Ladd's tone, the copyboy scuttled to the reference room and returned carrying a bulging envelope.

The editor ran nervous fingers through the clips. "Once tried to elope at 15," he read. "Fired from Connecticut Finishing School. Supposed to be engaged to John Burden." He looked up. "And chasing around town with a shoe polish gangster! Are you trying to protect this Park Avenue tramp?"

"Clem is only a headstrong kid," Mary pleaded. "And she comes of a really good background. Her father is fine."

"What do you think Janice French was?" Ladd flung at her. "I'd rather see this little fool saved from death by scandal than suppress the news and risk her life. If society is changing partners, the Gazette is going to report the fact." His voice grew sarcastic. "If you need help on your job, Miss Franklin, say so and I'll turn the entire staff over to you."

Maddened by Tom's manner, Mary answered with angry scorn. "I know the story."

"Then get it," snapped Ladd.

She turned and left. It was the first real bawling out she had ever had. The tears which she had struggled so hard to restrain overflowed. Back at her desk they continued to run down her white cheeks. She sat looking about the office where she'd been so happy a few moments before. Sighing, she reached in a desk drawer for a pencil and saw a note she'd made that morning to tell Ladd about some particular angle of the inquest. The tears began to fall again.

"I wouldn't cry." It was the Parson speaking. "He's in love with you."

"Oh no he isn't," sobbed Mary. "He hates me."

Memorial Isle Is Site For Tribute To War's Dead Here In Morning

Members of the August Mattson Post of the American Legion will conduct special memorial servcies this morning at Memorial Isle in the park here in honor of soldiers and sailors who gave their lives in the service of the nation.

The services at the island will follow a parade from the Legion hall. The parade is scheduled to start from the hall at ten o'clock. Included in the line of march will be Legionnaires, sons of Legionnaires, the high school band, resplendent in its new uniforms and the Boy Scouts of the city.

The principal address of the rites at the island will be "The Spirit of Americanism" by Major A. D. Alguire.

Crosses and Poppies

The program will open with the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by the high school band as the colors are raised by members of the Legion. A roll call of deceased veterans will be read as George Peoples and Gale Wescott take charge of the flag raising.

Eugene Noblet, Jr., will recite "In Flanders Field."

After this recital, six poppy girls will march across the bridge and place poppies at the foot of each of 54 white crosses that have been placed on the island in tribute to the deceased veterans. The crosses were made and presented to the Legion by members of the Hiawatha Guide Service.

The flower girls will be Albertine Strom, Virginia Wheaton, Joyce Johnson, Yvonne Lierman, Melanie DeHooghe and Phyllis Darion.

As the flower placing ceremony is carried out the band will play "There's a Long, Long Trail A-Winding."

The address by Major Alguire will follow the placing of the flowers.

As taps are being played by Eugene Noblet, Jr., a firing squad led by Sylvester Schram will fire a salute to the dead.

The city's public address amplifying system will carry the program which will take place on the island, to the citizens who will witness the ceremony from the mainland. For the first time, this year, the Memorial Day ceremonies will be at the island instead of at Fernwood cemetery as in the past.

General chairman in charge of the program today is Helmer J. Skogquist.

On Sunday members of the local Legion post placed flags at the grave of each veteran in the cemetery. Previously the graves had been prepared and decorated by the Legionnaires.

Shutout Is Handed Cardinals, 7 and 0; Triple Play Staged

St. Louis, May 29 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates shoved the St. Louis Cardinals deeper into second place today while they moved into third position with a 7 to 0 shutout behind the eight-hit pitching of Bob Klinger.

The Cardinals executed the first triple play in the majors this season in the first inning. With runners on first and second, Rizzo bounced to Don Gutteridge, who touched third and threw to Stu Martin forcing the man at second, and Martin's throw to first caught Rizzo.

The Dodger run came in the eighth inning and was started by Pressnell himself, when he beat out a hit behind second base. Goodie Rosen walked and after Pressnell was forced at third Fred Sington singled Rosen home with the winning run.

CURTIS RESORTERS WIN

Curtis, Mich.—Behind superb pitching by Larose of Curtis the Resorters won their opener of the Central league 2-1. Williams of Hulbert held the Curtis Resorters scoreless until the fifth when Ervin singled and stole second. Kalnbuch poked one over short and Ervin scored easily with the first run of the game. Kenny Lee sent Ervin across the plate again in the eighth with a long triple with Ervin on second.

Hulbert scored in the ninth after two were out on two hits and an outfield error.

Memorial Day, Curtis entertains Grand Marais in a holiday game that should be one of the big attractions in U. P. baseball. May 14 these teams played 4 innings with neither side having a man reach third and last year played a 12 inning affair with Curtis nipping Grand Marais in the twelfth.

Mehl And Badger Mates In Exhibitions Today

Three stars of the University of Wisconsin track team—Captain Walter Mehl, Riley Best and Ralph Moeller—will give exhibitions in their special events at the annual relay carnival here today.

Mehl will run an exhibition mile, the event he won at the Big Ten meet in Ann Arbor a week ago Saturday. The Badger captain is one of the country's outstanding distance runners, who has starred in the half, the mile and 2-mile runs. In high school, Mehl was state champion in the half-mile and his record still stands.

Entering the University of Wisconsin, he continued in this event in his sophomore year but when a foot injury handicapped his training for the shorter, and faster, distance, Coach Tom Jones suggested when Wehl was able to train again, that he work for a time in the 2-mile, figuring it would be less of a strain on his injured foot.

Mehl developed rapidly in the long grind and ended by taking both the indoor and outdoor Big Ten 2 mile championship in 1938, setting a new record of 9:10.4 in the outdoor race. This year, with the Badgers' great miler, "Chuck" Fenske, graduated, Mehl switched to that event and continued to win, also running the 2-mile with continued success in dual meets. His winning time in the Big Ten mile last week was 4:14.3. In the 1939 indoor title meet, the Badger captain won both the mile and 2-mile runs.

Riley Best, another Badger senior, has been a consistent point winner for Wisconsin for three years in both the high and broad jumps. He has a record of 6 feet 3 inches in the high jump and last week surprised even his coach by clearing 24 feet 3¾ inches to take second place in the broad jump. This was almost a foot better than Best had ever jumped before.

Ralph Moeller is a junior who has won letters in both football and track for two years. Last fall he was regular left end on Coach Harry Stuhldreher's Wisconsin football team. In track, Moeller's runs the sprints and tosses the weights. He will give an exhibition here with the shot and discus. Moeller was recently awarded the Walter Alexander scholarship at Wisconsin for excellence in character, in athletics and in the class room. He has a "B" average for his entire course and last semester made an average of 2.43 grades points per credit.

CAPT. WALTER MEHL

SPILLING the DOPE

BY JOHNNY INKSLINGER

DELTA COUNTY track teams are consistent, to say the least, three of them finished in second place in the three classes at Houghton Saturday, Escanaba in B, St. Joseph in C and Nahma in D . . . as was expected, Iron Mountain copped class B . . . Alpha pulled a surprise by winning the class D affair after having taken second at Iron Mountain . . . according to spectators' reports and our interpretation of the rules, it would seem that Nahma should have been awarded first place . . . Alpha we are told, used an ineligible contestant . . . when it was discovered, his points simply were deducted from the team total, which left Alpha still in first place . . . if Michigan High School Athletic association rules were consistent (and we have found them inconsistent many times), Alpha's efforts should be ruled out altogether . . . if an ineligible man is used in basketball or football, the school using the player must forfeit the whole game, not only the points he has scored . . . so, to our way of thinking, Nahma should be champions.

There's nothing like a depression for taking the starch out of stuffed shirts!

RELAY CARNIVAL today will draw the cream of Upper Peninsula track men . . . as well as three top notch college athletes . . . if the weather is anywhere nearly decent, the meet should be a treat for fans . . . the carnival always has been a good spectacle and is run off in good time . . . Walter Mehl, University of Wisconsin track captain, and one of the nation's top milers, and two of his team mates, Riley Best and Ralph Moeller, will give exhibitions in their respective events . . . Mehl will give an exhibition of the mile run and, if it is as good as that of Chuck Fenske last year, fans can be assured of an interesting afternoon . . . and Mehl is ranked right along with Fenske . . . we do not know what Best and Moeller have in store but we're betting it will be interesting.

Very often, we must see a man's secretary to learn why he loves his work!

W. T. LATHROP, our weatherman who is the original Cincinnati Reds fan, comes up with a funny one . . . the Cincinnati Enquirer in a 20-years-ago column reports a 13 inning game between Brooklyn and Cincinnati which ended with a score of 10-0 . . the visiting team made 10 runs in the first half of the 13th inning . . . Al Mamaux, who did his last chores for Baltimore not many years ago, pitched for Brooklyn and Hod Eller for Cincinnati . . . Old Diz' Dean tickled us not a little bit Sunday by standing the Pirates on their heads . . . if he keeps up his good work the next few times out, you can expect him to start spouting off again as of old . . . it's part of his publicity value to draw the crowds.

Boston Red Sox Downed 6-1 In First Game of Their Series

Boston, May 29 (AP)—Proving that they are as apt defensively as offensively, the Yankees increased their lead in the American league today to 6½ games, downing the Boston Red Sox 6-1 in the first game of their series.

The Sox, second place American league club, threatened on several occasions, but the Yankee infield, tired of being boosted for its hitting prowess alone, came up with four smartly executed double plays to cut off potential runs.

SLUGGING FEST WON BY TIGERS

Higgins Double Scores Kress With 2 Out In Ninth

Detroit, May 29. (AP)—A clubbing festival of 31 hits conducted on virtually a rally-every-inning basis ended today with the Detroit Tigers outpointing the St. Louis Browns, 10 to 9, in a panting finish after two hours and 17 minutes of frolic.

Equaling their best winning streak of the year—three straight—and treating a couple of old mates scandalously, the Tigers finally emerged on top in the last of the ninth when Pinky Higgins smashed a double to center to score Red Kress with two out.

On the mound at the time was long George Gill, who had gone in for another former Tiger, Roxie Lawson, after that worthy had stuck it out for eight burdensome innings and ultimately stepped aside for a pinch hitter.

Thomas Finishes

The Tigers, who collected 16 hits headlined by Rudy York's fourth homer of the season, needed all their power because Archie McKain, Harry Eisenstat and George Coffman could not stop the Brownies. Luther Thomas, recently acquired from Washington, pitched the ninth and was credited with the victory.

Even in this day when long drives are commonplace, the four-baser by York was a treat to see. Rudy came up in the third with two out and Dixie Walker on base from a single and Charley Gehringer from a walk.

One lunge with his big bat, and the ball headed for the far reaches of center field over Mel Almada's head. It had home run written all over it and eventually soared into the pavilion adjacent to the flag pole—440 feet from home plate.

The blow gave Detroit a 5 to 3 lead, which was quickly lost. Mark Christman, ex-Tiger, tripled in the fourth and scored on an infield out to tie the score and Myril Hoag's double and Joe Glenn's single put St. Louis ahead in the fifth.

No Favorites Today In Indianapolis Race

BY HAROLD HARRISON

Indianapolis, May 29 (AP)—Indianapolis' annual battle of speed—a daring test of men and motors that brings upward of $35,000 to the winner and a new crop of hard luck stories from thirty-two other drivers—will be fought tomorrow before a crowd that may reach 150,000.

At 10 a. m. (Central Standard Time) a bomb, bursting high in the air, will send thirty-three of America's greatest race drivers into the twenty-seventh annual 500-mile classic at the Indianapolis motor speedway.

Along about 2:30 p. m. a checkered flag, symbol of victory and the gold that goes with it, will wave in the face of one of those drivers.

The winner? There's no outstanding favorite.

If it should be Floyd Roberts, husky, mild-mannered Van Nuys, Calif., airplane factory worker, he would be the first man to win two Indianapolis races in a row. He won last year with a new 500-mile record of 117.2 miler an hour.

If Louis Meyer of Huntington Park, Calif., should catch the checkered flag, he would become the only four-time winner. His three previous triumphs already stand as a record.

But there are 31 other drivers to be reckoned with—from Jimmy Snyder of Chicago, who won the pole starting position with the fastest qualifying speed, 130.138 miles an hour, down to Billy Devore of St. John, Kan., the slowest qualifier at 116.527. The average speed of the 33 drivers over the 10-mile qualifying route was slightly better than 123 miles an hour, a new record.

Besides Snyder, Meyer and Roberts, other drivers whom the railbirds cast in favorite roles were Wilbur Shaw, Indianapolis; Mauri Rose, Columbus, O.; Rex Mays, Glendale, Calif., and Ted Horn, Babe Stapp, Bob Swanson and Kelly Petillo, all of Los Angeles.

Tonight Indianapolis was jammed with race fans. They milled in the downtown district, packed restaurants and taverns to the doors. The lineup of cars waiting for the opening of the speedway gates at 6 a. m. tomorrow stretched out for miles.

The drivers met at the speedway this afternoon to receive their final instructions from race officials and then they sought needed sleep until tomorrow morning.

Not since 1937 has a driver been killed at the speedway and not since 1935 has a driver met death in the race itself. One spectator was killed last year by a wheel which flew off a race car. Two accidents marked trial runs this year, injuring drivers Ronney Householder of Van Nuys, Calif., and Johnny Seymour of Grosse Pointe, Mich. Seymour, burned severely, is still in a hospital.

GRISSOM HOLDS CUBS, 6 AND 3

Hartnett Disagrees With Ump, Plays Last Half Under Protest

Cincinnati, May 29 (AP) — Lee Grissom held the Chicago Cubs to five hits today as the Cincinnati Reds, with a five-run splurge in the eighth, won 6 to 3 for their fourteenth victory in fifteen starts.

Gabby Hartnett, Cubs manager, said the latter half of the game was played under protest against an umpire's decision.

The Reds got to General Bill Lee, Earl Whitehill and Jack Russell for ten blows.

Gabby pasted a ball against the side of a passing truck, some 400 feet from the plate for his circuit clout in the fifth.

Then, in the last half of the inning he engaged in futile harangue against a decision of Umpire George Magerkurth holding Ernie Lombardi safe at second with a double and said he was playing the remainder of the game under protest.

Hartnett announced after the game the acquisition from Philadelphia of Pitcher Claude Passeau in a straight trade for Outfielder Joe Marty and Pitchers Walter Higbe and Ray Harrell.

The Reds and Cubs meet here tomorrow in a morning-and-afternoon double-header.

BY FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, May 29 (AP)—After a slightly lower drift during the greater part of today's session, the stock market reversed itself in the final hour and leaders posted gains of fractions to around 2 points.

Steels and motors were in front of the come-back, with late news from these industries tending to buoy buying sentiment in the afternoon.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished with a net advance of .3 of a point at 47.8. Transfers of 602,320 shares compared with 623,879 last Friday.

On the side of recovery was the estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute that this week's steel mill operations would be up 3.7 points at 52.2 per cent of capacity. The second sharp jump was attributed partly to settlement of the soft coal tie-up and heavy buying by consumers during the recent price cutting war.

In addition, support returned for the motors on word from Detroit the way had been cleared for settlement of the Briggs Mfg. strike with both company and union officials agreeing to place their controversy in the hands of federal conciliator James F. Dewey as umpire.

Lack of market interest was notable in the morning when the ticker tape frequently idled. Boardrooms were all but deserted as many traders remained away on the holiday they started Saturday. The opinion had been there would be an uninteresting market in view of the fact the exchange will shut down tomorrow for Memorial Day.

Trend indications abroad were lacking also because all European markets were on recess today in observance of Whitsuntide.

Bonds marched up with stocks at the last. Commodities were mixed. Wheat at Chicago was unchanged to 3-8 of a cent a bushel lower and corn up 1-4 to 7-8. Cotton lost 5 to 65 cents a bale.

A bit higher in the cub were Electric Band & Share, American Cyanamid "B" and Niagara Hudson Power. Small losers included Lockheed and Gulf Oil. Turnover of 83,000 shares compared with 108,000 Friday.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, May 29 (AP)—Wheat prices drifted about a cent lower today but then rallied and closed unchanged to 3-8 cent below Saturday's finishing levels.

Profit-taking, encouraged by generally favorable weather for crop development over the week-end, and evening-up operations prior to the Decoration Day holiday caused the early decline. The day's lows attracted increased purchases and some short covering, however, and when corn prices displayed independent strength wheat recovered after mid-session. The outlook for generally fair and warmer weather over much of the grain belt was a mild bullish factor.

Corn values rose as much as 3-4 to 1 cent at times, with December contracts representing the 1939 crop, strongest. Although crop conditions are more favorable due to recent rains, traders said prospect of reduced production this season, with acreage the smallest in 40 years, is a factor in the market.

Wheat, closing unchanged to 3-8 lower compared with Saturday, was quoted at 78 to 78 1-8 for July and 77 3-4 to 77 7-8 for September. Corn finished ¼ to 7-8 higher, July 51 3-8 to 51¼, September 52 7-8 to 52 3-4; oats unchanged to 1-8 lower; rye 1-8 off to ¼ up; lard 3 to 8 lower.

Corn strength was in the face of the heaviest local receipts in some time, totaling 383 cars, but much of this was believed to have been applied on contracts arranged previously. Demand from industries and other commercial interests was good, however, and advance bookings to arrive were small.

Oats dipped about ½ cent but then rallied with other grains. Rye action also was parallel to that of other grains.

Lard was quoted lower in sympathy with the cottonseed oil market.

On the Record
By Dorothy Thompson

ly aware that it would work only if there was the closest collaboration between government and business; only if the areas in which business and government were operating were delimited; only if private capital was given every encouragement by incentive taxation and only if labor relations were stabilized.

All of the liberal high-geared economists who have advocated this policy—Mr. Kevnes, of London; Mr. Copland(of Australia; Professor Mirdal, of Sweden —have insisted that there is no possible recovery by government spending, i. e., by government reflation, if political or economic policies result in business deflation or business stagnation.

This viewpoint is also supported by Professor Alvin H. Hansen, of Harvard, who is now quoted as a high-geared economist in defense of the last policy. Professor Hansen writes'* "It is wholly fallacious to assume that a government can safely rely, in a private capitalist economy, on spending its way out of depression into a sustained recovery."

Pump priming succeeded in Sweden, but has failed here, because it has not been pump priming here.

It is not pump priming to put a monkey wrench into the pump, muddy the well and hock the farm to transport water from irrigation projects built by W. P. A.

That's a gamble—a draw to an inside straight. What we need is at least three of a kind.

*"Full Recovery or Stagnation," published in 1938 by Norton.

Township Library Lists New Books

Munising, Mich., May 29.—New books recently received at the Munising township library are reviewed by Miss Brynhild Oas, township librarian.

"And Tell of Time" by Laura Krey. From the final year of the Civil War to the eve of the 1890's, from Virginia to the Brazos valley of Texas, this story sweeps forward with an epic breadth and rhythm.

"The Other Brother" by Clarissa Cushman. Life in a college town becomes complicated for the sons of the college president when Everett and Anthony, fall in love with the same girl.

"Frost Flower" by Helen Hull. This portrait of a modern housewife, though not perhaps very subtle, is accurate, detailed and entertaining.

"Royal Regiment" by Gilbert Frankau. The story of a British army officer whose love for his commanding officer's wife reaches a climax on the day his king abdicates. A long and absorbingly interesting romance.

"Guiding Human Misfits" by A. Adler. A practical application of individual psychology.

"Mental Conflicts and Personality" by M. Sherman. Presents a systematic evaluation of important theories of mental conflicts in determining human behavior.

"Insect Oddities" by Raymond Ditmars. A book of wonders, which opens new worlds to its readers. Huge insects, moths that can fly three hundred miles an hour, and giant ten foot worms are but a few of these wonders.
